1. NEWS FROM LONGFORD PPN

Welcome to the first Longford Public Participation Network E-bulletin.

The Public Participation Network is the new structure established by Government to facilitate and support input by the community sector into decision making by local authorities and other local policy making structures.

We would like to take this opportunity to invite you to send us any information for inclusion in the E-bulletin on local news and events, National and EU news, funding opportunities, upcoming training and workshops or policies of relevance to the Community & Voluntary, Social Inclusion or Environmental sectors. Just email Siobhan at ppn@longfordcoco.ie. The PPN E-bulletin will be circulated monthly.

Longford PPN update:

90 community groups registered with the Longford PPN in October 2014. All groups were required to self-select their Electoral College i.e. Community & Voluntary, Social Inclusion or Environment and also the Municipal District (MD) they belong to i.e. Longford, Granard or Ballymahon MD.

All groups were then contacted to seek nominations for a 9 member working group called the PPN Secretariat. The deadline for nominations was the 29th November 2014. The requirements for the setup of the Secretariat were to elect a minimum of 2 Community & Voluntary, 2 Social Inclusion, 2 Environment and 1 area representative from each Municipal District. Consideration also had to be given to gender balance and geographical spread.

Once nominations were received and validated, ballot sheets for the PPN Secretariat election were sent to all registered groups. The process to select the Secretariat was by secret ballot postal vote. The deadline for return was December 17th 2014. 61 registered community groups returned valid votes. The election was held on the 6th January 2015 and was overseen by Longford County Council. The new elected Secretariat for the PPN is as follows:

Elected Environmental Representatives:

- Ray Hogan
- Tilla Shulte Ostermann

Elected Social Inclusion Representatives:

- Breda Murphy
- Seamus Orr

Elected Community & Voluntary Representatives:

- Joe Murphy
- Ruth Mc Garry Quinn

Area Representative for the Ballymahon Municipal District:

- Brendan Quigley

Area Representative for the Granard Municipal District:

- Tess Murphy

Area Representative for the Longford Municipal District:

- Connie Geraty

The purpose of the Secretariat is to administer the day to day running of the PPN, facilitate decisions and coordinate activities of the PPN.

The next elections will be for vacancies on the Local Community Development Committee and the various Strategic Policy Committees and Boards.

If there are any community group's you know who are not yet registered with the Longford PPN they are invited to do so online or download at www.longfordcoco.ie , e-mail ppn@longfordcoco.ie or contact Siobhan Cronogue at 087 261 5583

Galway Astronomy Festival

21st February 2015

Oscar Wilde reminds us that although we are all in the gutter, some of us are looking at the stars. The Galway Astronomy Festival now in its 11th year, has become one of the most popular events in Ireland of the Irish astronomical calendar, where amateurs and professionals meet, essential for exchanging information, successful stargazing and mutual progress. We look forward to seeing you, hopefully under clear skies.

Five suggested options along the Wild Atlantic Way.

Perched on the edge of Europe, the Wild Atlantic Way offers hundreds of stunning circular and linear treks - for both beginner and those looking for a little more challenge! Outstanding scenic treks with views of epic cliffs and thundering surf on deserted beaches await you or looped hikes on isolated islands offering ocean views - the choice is yours. Get away from the hustle and bustle of daily life, fill your lungs with fresh air and then stop off in a village pub for the creamiest of pints and liveliest of traditional music. Warning! The only difficulty is deciding which spectacular hike to choose from.

Alapechian Trail is a linear trail in the most north western corner of Ireland covering over one hundred kilometres. Rocky, boggy and remote, enjoy the 360 panoramic views of lush green landscapes, jagged coastlines, barren cliffs and empty beaches. On this wild, rugged and remote trail you will be surrounded by imposing mountains, costal scenery and tranquil lakes. There is space to breathe and really get away from it all.

Diamond Hill, located in the spectacular Connemara National Park. Choose from the Upper or Lower Diamond Hill trail - both of these way-marked trails wind through heather, bog and grasslands. They invite you to amazing panoramic views of distant harbours, hidden bays, secret inlets, and clusters of desolate islands dotted in the Atlantic Ocean. Easily navigable, the trails offer a tranquil few hours amongst birdlife, coastal scenery and some of the best seascapes of Connemara.

Doolin Cliff Walk is a 20 kilometre coastal cliff path that leads you over the magnificent coastal Cliffs of Moher. Rising to 214 metres, relish the breath-taking ocean views of the Aran Islands and Galway Bay. Listen to the crashing waves and thundering surf below. But keep your eye on the track because this challenging and seaward demanding trail is not for the faint hearted! The sea cliff walk will lead you to the intimate village of Doolin, world famous for its traditional Irish music, craic and fun.

Beara Way is a 196 km circuit of the south western Beara Peninsula. Dotted with archaeological and historical sites, the peninsula is shrouded in mystical legends. Stop off at stone circles and ring forts, then pause to overlook spectacular off shore islands. Along the route, pass empty beaches and traditional fishing harbours. Wind your way down narrow roads that will lead you to the door of some of the country's finest eateries.

Sheep's Head is tucked into the southern western corner of Ireland. Sheep's Head is one of the remotest hiking spots on the Wild Atlantic Way, covering a total circuit of 88kms. This isolated ridge juts out 21 kilometres into the fierce Atlantic coast. Both short and long loops offer wild scenery, picturesque loughs and wild coastal views and trails pass through deserted famine settlements, lush farmland and heather filled fields.

Green-Schools in Ireland

Green-Schools in Ireland is operated and coordinated by the Environmental Education Unit of An Taisce (FEE member for Ireland), in partnership with Local Authorities throughout the country, is supported by the Department of Environment, Community and Local Government, the Department of Transport, Tourism and Sport and is sponsored by the Wrigley Company Ltd.

Over 3,800 primary, secondary and special schools in Ireland (>93% of all Irish schools) are currently participating part in the programme and 2991 schools have been awarded the Green Flag. The Irish Green-Schools programme is one of the most successful within the international network. One of the main factors in the success of the Irish Green-Schools programme is the partnership between the Environmental Education Unit of An Taisce and Local Authorities i.e. the financial and time contribution of the Local Authorities to the programme. Most of the Local Authorities (City & County Councils) have an Environmental Education Officer (EEO). These officers provide the invaluable on the ground support to schools undertaking the programme.

Green-Schools is a themed and seven-step programme.

Irish Tourism 2015 – The Year Ahead

Expectations within the tourism sector for 2015 are very positive. After two years of strong growth, the industry enters this year with a belief that this trend will be sustained.

Almost all (99%) accommodation providers expect the same or increased tourist volumes next year with four out of five of these businesses citing the maintenance of the 9% VAT rate as a positive factor affecting anticipated performance.

Hotels are the most optimistic with more than eight out of ten expecting to increase their volume of business in 2015. Within this calculation, there are high expectations for both the domestic and overseas markets, especially the North American market, where many (57%) hoteliers expect to see increased tourists in 2015 on top of two years of rising numbers. Maintenance of the 9% VAT is particularly seen as significant to competitiveness in the hotel sector where the vast majority (86%) of operators point to this as a likely positive factor for their performance in 2014.

With almost two thirds (63%) expecting increased volumes and one third (35%) anticipating similar levels of business, guesthouses are also expecting a good out-turn in 2015 - particularly from North America.

Even the B&B sector, which was particularly affected by the downturn, is now much more upbeat with two thirds (66%) of operators expecting increased business in 2015 – continuing the turnaround in sentiment seen last year. This brighter outlook is underpinned by performance in overseas markets in 2014, especially Europe and US, where the authentic Irish offering of a B&B still holds a strong appeal.

Restaurants based in traditional tourism regions experienced a significant increase in overseas customers during 2014 following a number of difficult years. Now, four out of five restaurants are expecting growth in volumes during 2015. Not surprisingly, the retention of the 9% VAT rate is also cited as crucial by the restaurant sector as it helps restaurants to offer better value at a time when many customers have lower disposable income. Eight out of ten (81%) restaurateurs say that the VAT rate will be a positive factor for 2015.

Tourism developments are also colouring the outlook for 2015. Two in five businesses nationally are very optimistic about the anticipated benefits that the Wild Atlantic Way will bring as it is further developed and promoted at home and abroad. It is no surprise to find that this is particularly true in western regions, where this proportion rises to over 60%.

Looking at the bottom line, 82% of those businesses who regularly work with Fáilte Ireland expect to increase their earnings from overseas tourists next year. Plus, some 78% expect to see improved profitability.

However, some concerns still linger and it should be noted that low cost competition and fuel and energy costs are the biggest worries for tourism businesses facing into 2015 – mentioned respectively by 57% and 53% of accommodation providers.

6. EU NEWS

Commissioner Hogan vows to tackle supply chain profit-taking

Speaking in Dublin today (6 January 2015) at an event to mark the 60th anniversary of the founding of the IFA, EU Commissioner for Agriculture and Rural Development, Phil Hogan, said that he is determined to tackle the problems in the food supply chain which mean that consumers pay too much for groceries and farmers pay too much for inputs such as fertiliser, even at a time of falling oil and gas prices.

"How is it that even though crude oil prices have fallen by 45% since last June, and gas is doing the same, I see that fertiliser prices are going up by 7% in 2015? All players in the food chain must realise that producers must get a decent return for raw material". Commissioner Hogan plans to meet with the EU's Competition Commission, Margrethe Vestager, who will investigate any breaches of competition law. He went on to say that he thought that the current scope of the EU

Supply Chain Initiative was at present too narrow to deal with all suppliers who extract unjustified high profit margins.

The Commissioner also pointed out that agriculture, fisheries and forestry are responsible for almost a third of the new jobs created, or 27,000 jobs in 2013: "The agri-food sector, one of our few real indigenous industries, has contributed more than any other to the recovery. In 2013 alone, 61,000 new jobs were created in Ireland – agriculture, forestry and fisheries contributed 30% or almost 27,000 jobs."

Better protection for victims of domestic violence anywhere in the EU

As of this Sunday, victims of violence - notably those who have suffered domestic violence or stalking – will be able to guarantee themselves better protection in any EU Member State. The new rules mean that restraining, protection and barring orders issued in one Member State are now quickly and easily recognisable across the EU through simple certification.

"Rights of the victims of violence will now be guaranteed outside their own country too, wherever they are in Europe", said Věra Jourová, the EU's Commissioner for Justice, Consumers and Gender Equality. "In the EU, an estimated one in five women face violence at some point in their life and unfortunately most often this physical violence comes from someone close to the person, such as their partner."

A citizen who has suffered domestic abuse will now be able to feel safe to travel outside their home country – by simply transferring the order that protects them from the offender. Previously, victims would have to go through complex procedures to get their protection recognised in other EU Member States – and enter a different procedure for certification in each country. Now, such protection orders will be easily recognised in any EU Member State, meaning a citizen who has suffered violence can travel without having to go through burdensome procedures.

"The new procedure will mean that women or men who suffer violence can have the protection they deserve and go on with their lives. They will be able to choose to live in another EU Member State or to travel on holiday without fearing for their safety," Věra Jourová added.

The new mechanism consists of two separate instruments: the Regulation on mutual recognition of protection measures in civil matters and the Directive on the European Protection Order. Together, the two instruments will ensure that all victims of violence have the possibility to get their protection orders recognised in any EU Member State. The mechanisms reflect the differences in the Member States' national protection measures, which can be of civil, criminal or administrative nature. The rules together will ensure free circulation of the most common types of protection measures within the EU.

More support needed for victims

The need for support and protection of victims is backed up by a report published today by the EU Agency for Fundamental Rights (FRA), which concludes that more targeted victim support services are needed in the EU. Despite improvements, challenges remain for victim support services in many Member States. Specific suggestions for improvement include ensuring victims have access to targeted support services - including trauma support and counselling, removing bureaucratic hurdles for victims to legal aid, and ensuring people have information about their rights and the services available.

The European Commission is committed to improving the rights of the 75 million people that become victims of crime each year. In 2012, an EU directive setting minimum standards for the rights, support and protection of victims across the EU became law (IP/12/1066) and will become binding on Member States by 16 November 2015. With measures such as the EU-wide protection orders that apply as of Sunday, and the minimum rights for victims, the European Commission is working to strengthen the rights of persons who fall victims to crime wherever they are from, and wherever in the EU they should fall victim to crime.

Innovative Irish SMEs awarded share of €117 million in Commission SME grants

Four Irish Small and Medium Sized Enterprises (SMEs) have been awarded European Commission funding of €8.5 million (up to €2.5 million each) for innovation and development of their business plans.

Biosensia Limited (Dublin, Nova UCD), INNOPHARMA (Dublin), Radisens Diagnostics Limited (Cork), and SIGMOID (Dublin, The Invent Centre DCU) are among 78 SMEs from 18 countries selected by the European Commission in this funding round (Phase 2) worth €108 million. Grantees are also entitled to benefit from up to 12 days of business coaching.

A further five Irish SMEs: CLIMOTE Ltd (Dundalk), Esave Corporation Ltd (Dublin), Schwungrad Energie Ltd (Dublin), SSIM (Limerick), and Vitalograph(Ireland) Ltd (Limerick) have been successful in securing €50,000 to finance feasibility studies (Phase 1) in a separate stage of funding worth €9 million. They can also request up to three days of business coaching. These companies follow 10 Irish companies that were successful in the first round of feasibility study funding, announced in November last year.

These are the latest results of calls under the new €3 billion SME Instrument, launched under Horizon 2020 to help innovative small firms get ideas from the lab to the market and help generate growth and jobs for Europe. This new funding brings the total amount from the SME Instrument so far destined for innovative companies to €125 million.

Over 275 innovative SMEs are on track to receive a total of €117 million in new grants from Horizon 2020, the EU's research and innovation funding programme. The Commission received 580 project proposals involving 785 SMEs by the first cut-off date of Horizon 2020's SME Instrument programme Phase 2 (9 October 2014). Evaluation by independent experts showed that 132 of the proposals met the evaluation standard. 59% have been selected for funding.

Since the launch of the programme on 1st January 2014, 333 projects involving 361 SMEs have been selected for EU grants under Phase 1 of the SME Instrument, totalling €16.7 million. Together with Phase 2 funding, this amounts to almost €125 million so far from the SME Instrument on track to support innovative companies.

Background

With a budget of nearly €80 billion over seven years, Horizon 2020 is the biggest ever EU research and innovation programme and envisages record funding for SMEs. At least 20%, or nearly €9 billion from Horizon 2020's 'leadership in industrial technologies' and 'societal challenge' pillars, is expected to benefit SMEs directly in the form of grants, including via the SME Instrument.

Through the SME Instrument, the European Union wants to finance the most innovative small companies with a high growth potential. The Instrument is worth around €3 billion over seven years and offers fast and simple grants for business innovation feasibility studies (Phase 1) and demonstration projects (Phase 2). Investment-mature concepts can, in addition, benefit from business development advice and other support services (Phase 3).

The application process is easy but only the very best projects can expect to receive funding. Eligible topics are set out in the Horizon 2020 Work Programme on 'Innovation in SMEs'. SMEs from EU Member States or countries associated to Horizon 2020 can apply. In 2014 and 2015 more than 1,300 projects will be supported under the SME Instrument.

8. FUNDING

GIY Get Ireland Growing Fund in partnership with AIB, 2015

Developed by GIY in partnership with AIB, to encourage food growing projects community groups, schools and not-for-profit initiatives seeking financial assistance to develop their food growing project. Over 100 community food growing projects were funded with grants of between €500 and €2,500 in 2014.

The GIY Get Ireland Growing fund is open to community groups, schools, Allotments with Communal space, Community gardens and not-for-profits looking to develop or enhance an existing community food-growing initiative. Schools can apply for training services or equipment that will allow students to grow their own fruit or vegetables.

Criteria

The Get Ireland Growing Fund is aimed at supporting community food growing initiatives from the following organisation types:

- 1) Community and voluntary groups
- 2) NGOs and not-for-profits
- 3) Community gardens and allotment projects
- 4) Schools

The Get Ireland Growing Fund is aimed at promoting food growing in the community. The projects should have a significant promotional and community outreach element (that is, encouraging more people to grow their own food). The projects should be new or a significant enhancement of an existing project (i.e. funding will not be provided to retrospectively fund work already carried out). We are particularly interested in projects that will use community food growing to:

- Improves the quality of life for participants
- Provides a catalyst for neighbourhood and community development
- Stimulates Social Interaction
- Encourages Self-Reliance
- Beautifies Neighbourhoods
- Produces Nutritious Food
- Reduces Family Food Budgets
- Conserves Resources
- Creates opportunity for recreation, exercise, therapy, and education
- Preserves Green Space
- Creates income opportunities and economic development
- Provides opportunities for intergenerational and cross-cultural connections
